

United Nations
Framework Convention on Climate Change

What are long-term low greenhouse gas emission development strategies?

The Paris Agreement also encourages all Parties to formulate long-term low GHG emission development strategies. In doing so, Parties should be mindful of the Agreement's objectives in Article 2, taking into account their common but differentiated responsibilities and respective capabilities, in the light of different national circumstances.

The COP invited Parties to communicate to the secretariat, by 2020, such mid-century, long-term strategies and countries have started submitting them. The strategies received are made available on the secretariat's website.